

By lifting the cross-ownership ban the FCC is showing that this administration is in the pocket of business interests in every way. Why have any antitrust laws, why make a distinction between business and government at all? The FCC's corporate-influenced impotence on the matter of low-power radio broadcasting is another example of the lack of distinction. How convenient it is for the FCC that this issue will never be exposed in the media.